

Argumentative text: Phone calls versus messaging-apps.

At first, instant messaging and phone calls are both very useful for communicating. While you can call someone and be able to feel almost all the emotions the other one is feeling at that conversation, you would have to make a great effort to do so with the instant messages.

Moreover, the instant messaging apps are evolving, and adding more ways to talk with the people, like sending gifs, videos, audios....

Even though the elder people grew up knowing how to use a phone, the messaging apps and cell phones are newer, and they have to make a great effort to learn how to use them due to the difficulty of adapting, so many of them still end up by using only the phone calls.

Besides, we have to realize that every change of the technologies can be very difficult for the people to adapt to, and the only purpose of the technology is to make life easier, so it's great that both things exist, to let the people choose their way to talk with someone else.

Although it's more expressive, people are not always capable to get a phone call, and you can send a message whenever you want.

All in all, if you know at what time of the day the other person is able to talk and you are a little extroverted, it would be better to talk via phone call.
